

Heavy New snowfall

Date

Sun, 12/29/2024 - 16:19

Activity

Snowboarding

Teaching a Level 1 up at Woody Creek Cabin the past couple of days. 2-2.5' has fallen since Friday, but 11" of that snow came throughout today.

We toured up the East Side of Woody Ridge today. There was heavy snow throughout the day, steady winds (light-moderate) above the tree line all day, and low visibility. No cracking/collapsing, and no observed avalanches in the visible terrain. The skin track was completely refilled on the tour back to the cabin (within ~2 hours).

We dug below Rip Curl: NE facing aspect @ 8620'. Average HS 95-105cm. CT8 on the buried surface hoar about 2' down. ECT results: no propagation. The new snow that fell today was F-hard and unconsolidated.

Region

Cooke City

Location (from list)

Woody Ridge

Observer Name

Beartooth Powder Guides